

Second-Priority Goal Line

On rimmed or dumped-in pucks, imagine a second goal-line behind the net. The intent of this line is to practice a "strong-side-hold" whenever a puck is rimmed around the boards, meaning the goaltender should make a strong effort to keep the puck on the same side of the ice it was dumped in on (puck may literally cross the line, it's more the spirit of the rule that's the point). A strong-side hold greatly disrupts a forecheck and allow the goaltender to make a cleaner play to the defensemen, that regains possession and gets the puck moving north out of the zone without the D being checked, likely creating a chance against.
